"a vignette is basically a MOC built on a small base" - I'm removing (daily) things that are blatantly not vignettes from the group. Consider the Minifig Stars group, or the LEGO group (or countless others) if what you're photographing is not a Lego Vignette. Thank you.

I hate to sound weird, but this group is for photos taken from inside refrigerators with the door closed. All other images are liable to be removed from the pool. Thanks.

Why your photograph was removed:
a.) was your photograph not taken inside a fridge? (you're standing outside looking in, or it's not a fridge at all)
b.) was the camera inside the fridge, but you left the fridge door open? (I can see you, or I can see the light is on)

Yes, it makes it harder. That's the point.

A woman with short brown hair and glasses is interacting with a Siemens Internet Fridge. She is pointing at a touch screen display on the front of the refrigerator, which shows a video call interface. The refrigerator has a dark, modern design with a display screen and a small keypad. The word 'SIEMENS' is visible on the top left of the refrigerator door.

"Can you imagine a home appliance product such as a refrigerator that is smart enough to make phone calls and conduct video conversations? It might sound like something from a science fiction novel but such developments are gradually becoming a reality at the 2010 Shanghai Expo."
